Charter Amendment re. Exclusion

The school may exclude a student for just cause, if otherwise legally permissible, and as defined by school policy. Exclusion may involve refusing to enroll an applicant or removing a currently enrolled student. Just cause shall involve grounds that reasonably indicate that the child poses a threat of harm to him/herself or others, or poses a threat of substantial disruption or material interference with the school's operations. Any child who is to be excluded is entitled to due process, as defined by school policy, before a final exclusion decision. Any exclusion decision shall be permanent unless otherwise retracted or modified by the board, in its sole discretion.
